Queries with multiple joins like this one often lead to confusion, such as the one behind this question that I have often heard from students: "There seems to be three tables joined to the Employee table in this query—two are inner joins and the other is an outer join.

Multiple Joins Work just like Single Joins in SQL Server

I have read the question. I was simply pointing out that the question "I've a MAC address... How I can find the IP Address of that machine." is invalid since it might be running properly with no IP addresses (or maybe 20 of them) bound to the same card/mac address.

Find a IP with the MAC address (reverse Lookup)
