Caleb's words came back to her. She trusted Caleb, but more than that, she did not want to die as a wolf snack. She caught the lead wolf's eye, flipped him the bird, and then jammed the accelerator to the floor. The little car shot forward. Her scream echoing all around the tiny interior, she closed her eyes and waited for the inevitable ...

Sorry Sarah! As a "whole new level of PNR" this installment comes in as one of the worst PNR I've ever read. If the "Shadow Wranglers" are going to be a series, the plot and character development need more bite if the books are going to go from "Fizzling" to your usual "Sizzling".
