Blaze is a novel by American writer Stephen King, published under the pseudonym of Richard Bachman. King announced on his website that he "found it" in an attic. In fact (as mentioned in the afterword of Different Seasons) it was written before Carrie and King offered the original draft of the novel to his Doubleday publishers at the same time as 'Salem's Lot.

Stephen King admits up front that the newly published Blaze is a trunk novel: his introduction describes how he wrote Blaze in the early '70s (the "period of greatest productivity" for his intermittent pseudonym Richard Bachman, which he therefore revives here) and then rejected it, boxed it up, and set it aside. Recently, he revived the book, rewriting it "fast, never looking ahead or ...

He would know because, of course, he IS Richard Bachman. Blaze is a gentle giant with a mental disability, brain-damaged as a child at the hands of an abusive father, and now in the thrall of a small-time con artist named George—who in Ron McLarty's narration sounds like a credibly raspy George Burns.
