Human migration is the movement by people from one place to another with the intentions of settling, permanently or temporarily in a new location. The movement is often over long distances and from one country to another, but internal migration is also possible; indeed, this is the dominant form globally [citation needed]. People may migrate as individuals, in family units or in large groups.

1. Introduction. Why has Silicon Valley become the most entrepreneurial area not only in the U.S. but also arguably in the world? More generally, how can policymakers achieve “regional advantage” (Saxenian, 1994) at the sub-national or state level? Understanding the microfoundations of clustering is of interest both to scholars of agglomeration and to policymakers who wish to encourage ...

Former Supreme Court Justice John Paul Stevens, now 99 years old, has written a book, The Making of a Justice: My First 94 Years. Apparently he considers the District of Columbia versus Heller decision to be the worst of all those that was made during his time on the Supreme Court, that one on a 5-4 vote. That decision upended the interpretations of the Second Amendment that had been in place ...
