In physics, center of gravity is the point where the entire weight of a body can be assumed to be concentrated. There is another term used in science, called center of mass, which is the point where the entire mass of the body can be assumed to be concentrated. We need to calculate the mean position of the mass of the object to find its center of mass.

The experimental determination of the center of mass of a body uses gravity forces on the body and relies on the fact that in the parallel gravity field near the surface of the earth the center of mass is the same as the center of gravity. The center of mass of a body with an axis of symmetry and constant density must lie on this axis.

The center of gravity of an aircraft is the point over which the aircraft would balance. Its position is calculated after supporting the aircraft on at least two sets of weighing scales or load cells and noting the weight shown on each set of scales or load cells. The center of gravity affects the stability of the aircraft. To ensure the aircraft is safe to fly, the center of gravity must fall within specified limits established by the aircraft manufacturer.
