Pelvis, hip, and femur (upper leg) fractures often completely immobilize the person. Because broken bones of the pelvis and upper leg can cause massive, life-threatening internal bleeding, people with these types of fractures should be evacuated unless splinting and carriage are absolutely necessary. In these cases, the splint should extend to the lower back and down past the knee of the ...

BEST ANSWER: I don't have a good answer. I bought a used Delta in 2000. I don't recall if the rubber tires broke or were slipping when I tuned up the saw. I replaced the rubber tires with urethane because they were easier to install and I didn't want to deal with cleaning glue off the wheels again.
