Biology Other Mechanisms Of Evolution

These are evolution by: mutation, genetic drift, gene flow, non-random mating, and natural selection (previously discussed here). Each mechanism of evolution can be characterized by how it affects fitness, adaptation, the average phenotype of a trait in a population, and the genetic diversity of the population.

Genetic drift. Another mechanism for evolution is genetic drift, which can occur when a small group of individuals leaves a population and establishes a new one in a geographically isolated region. For example, when a small population of fish is placed in a lake, the fish population will evolve into one that is different from the original.

11.3 Other Mechanisms of Evolution. Genetic drift is a change in allele frequencies due to chance. • Genetic drift causes a loss of genetic diversity. • It is most common in small populations. • A population bottleneck can lead to genetic drift. -It occurs when an event drastically reduces population size.

Speciation. Speciation is the evolutionary process by which new biological species arise. The biologist Orator F. Cook was the first to coin the term 'speciation' for the splitting of lineages or "cladogenesis," as opposed to "anagenesis" or "phyletic evolution" occurring within lineages.

Whether genetic drift is a minor or major contributor to speciation is the subject matter of much ongoing ...
