Animal cells only have a cell membrane; they do not have a cell wall as plant cells do. The cell membrane is a double layer made up of phospholipids. The cell membrane is a double layer made up of phospholipids.

Animal Cell - Definition, Functions and Structure ...

Best Answer: Don't listen to this other guy... he's telling you some ridiculous stuff that doesn't even make sense. Active transport means that something is having to physically carry the items across the cell membrane. This requires ATP or energy because you are moving against the concentration gradient.
